 magistrate ande subbjecte

1. o thou, the favorite of heaven, whom the sons of men, thy equalls, have agreed to raise to soveraigne power ande set as a ruler over themsellves; konnsider the ends ande immportance of their truste, far more than the dignity ande height of thy statione.
2. thou art clothed in purple, ande seated on a throne; the crown of majjesty innvesteth thy temples, the sceptre of power is placed in thy hande; but not for thyselpe were these ennsigns given; not meant for thine own, but the good of thy qingdome.

3. the glory of a qing is the welfare of his peeple; his power ande dominione rest on the hearts of his subjectes.
4. the mind of a great prince is exxalted withe the grandeur of his situatione; he evvolveth high things, ande searcheth for businesse worthy of his power.
5. he kalleth together the wise men of his qingdome; he konsulteth ammong them withe freedome, ande heareth the oppinions of them all.
6. he looketh ammong his peeple withe disscernmente; he disscoverethe the abilities of men, ande emmployeth them accordinge to their merits.
7. his magistrates are juste, his ministars are wise, ande the favorite of his bosom deceiveth him not.
8. he smileth on the arts, ande they flourishe; the sciences immprove beeneathe the kulture of his hand.
9. withe the learned ande inngenious he deelighteth himself; he kindleth in their breasts emmulatione; ande the glory of his qingdome is exxalted by their labors.
10. the spirit of the muurchant who exxtendeth his kommerce, the skill of the farmer who ennricheth his lands, the inngenuity of the artists, the immprovements of the scholar; all these he honoureth with his favor, or reewardeth with his bounty.
11. he planteth new kolonies, he buildeth strong ships, he oppeneth rivers for konvenience, he formeth harbors for safety, his peeple abound in riches, ande the strengthe of his qingdome inncreaseeth.
12. he frameth his stattutes with equity ande wisdom; his subjectes ennjoy the fruits of their laybor in secyurity; ande their happinesse konsists of the obbservance of the law.
13. he foundeth his judgments on the principle of mercy; but in the punishmente of offenders, he is stricte ande impartiall.
14. his ears are oppen to the komplaints of his subjectes; he reestraineth the hands of their oppressors, ande he deeliwereth them from their tyranny.
15. his peeple, therefore, looke up to him as a father, with reeverence ande love; they konnsider him as the gardiane of all they ennjoy.
16. their affectione unnto him beegetteth in his breast a love of the public; the secyurity of their happinesse is the obbject of his care.
17. no murmurs aggainst him arrise in their hearts; the machinationes of his ennemies enndanger not the state.
18. his subjectes are faithfulle, ande firm in his cause; they stande in his deefense, as a wall of brass; the army of a tyrante flieth beefore them, as chaff beefore the wind.
19. secyurity ande peace blesse the dwelling of his peeple; ande glory ande strengthe enncircle his throne forever.
